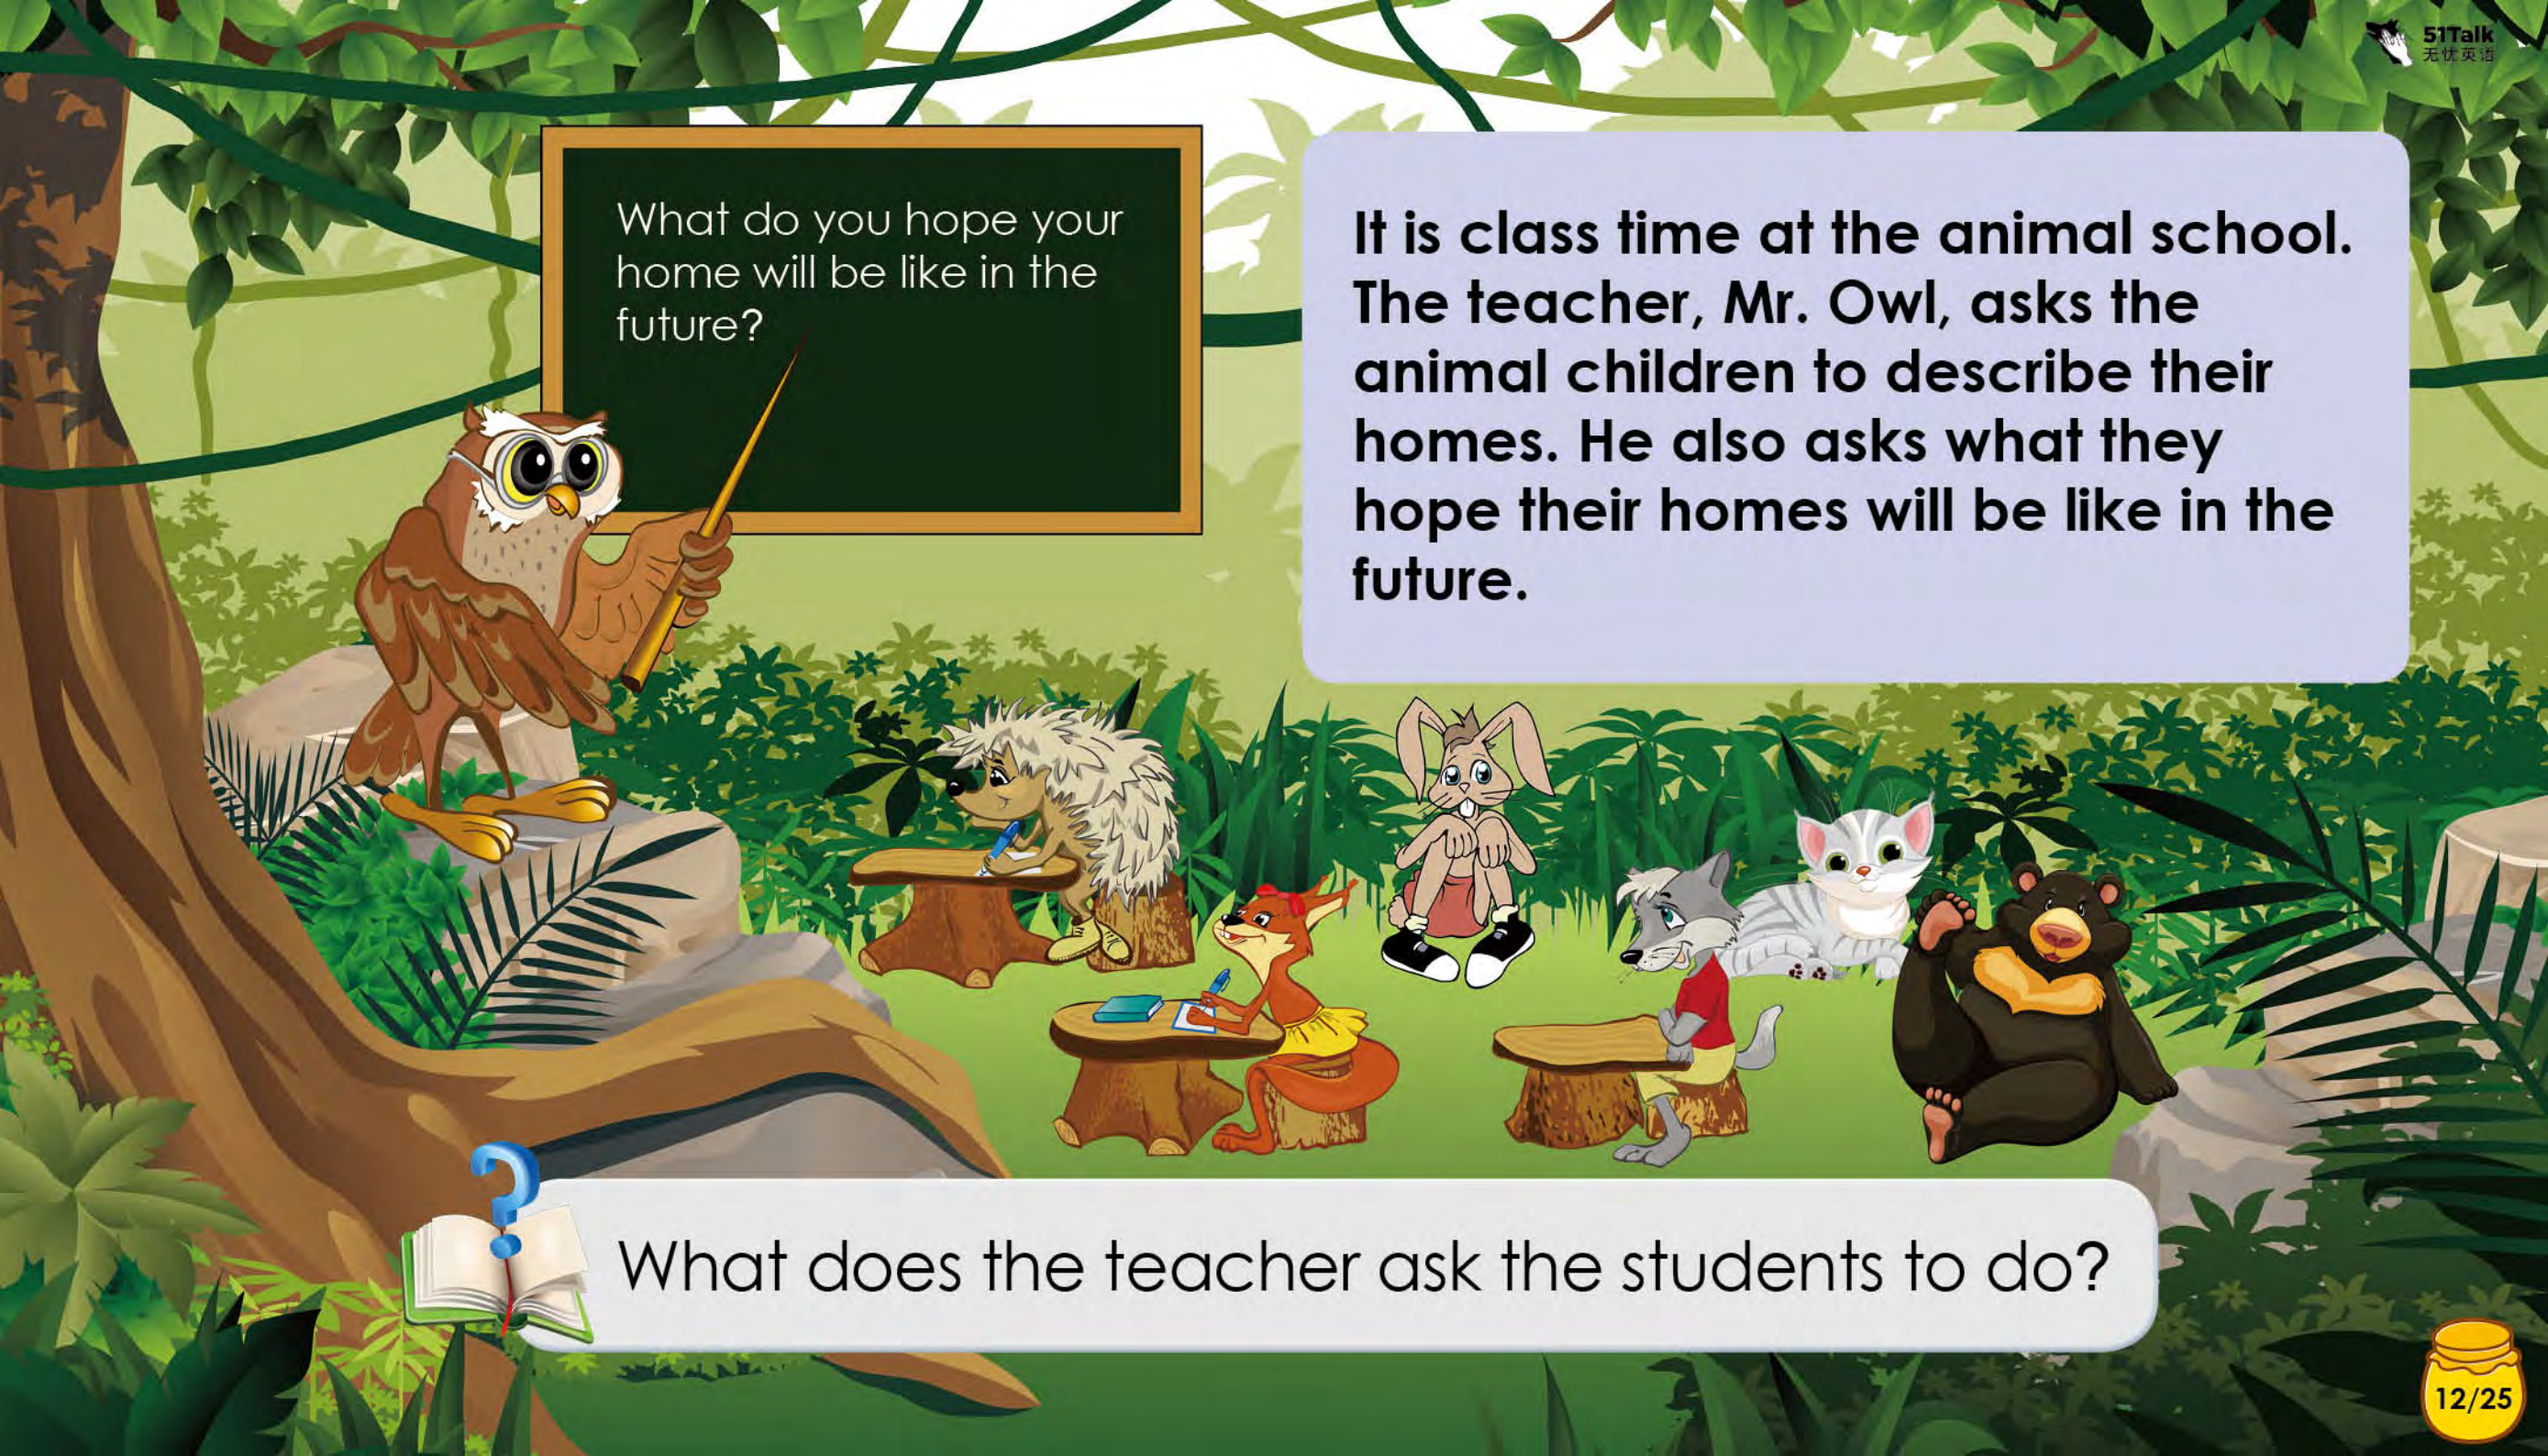
Let's read!



What do you hope your home will be like in the future?
It is class time at the animal school. The teacher, Mr. Owl, asks the animal children to describe their homes. He also asks what they hope their homes will be like in the future.
What does the teacher ask the students to do?
12/25

First, the little cat speaks. “My home is not very big. We live in a small cardboard box. It’s really cozy and warm, though, and all my family is there. But I hope we will move home and live in a big house, like people.”

today’s home

future home

What is the cat’s home like?

Next, the little rabbit speaks. “My home is under the ground. It’s safe and there’s lots of food too. There are also small tunnels that let me go to see my friends. But I hope we will move home so we can live in a big field.”

Grammar

Simple future tense

In the simple future tense, “will” is used to talk about or predict the future.

e.g. I hope we will move.

I will live abroad in the future.

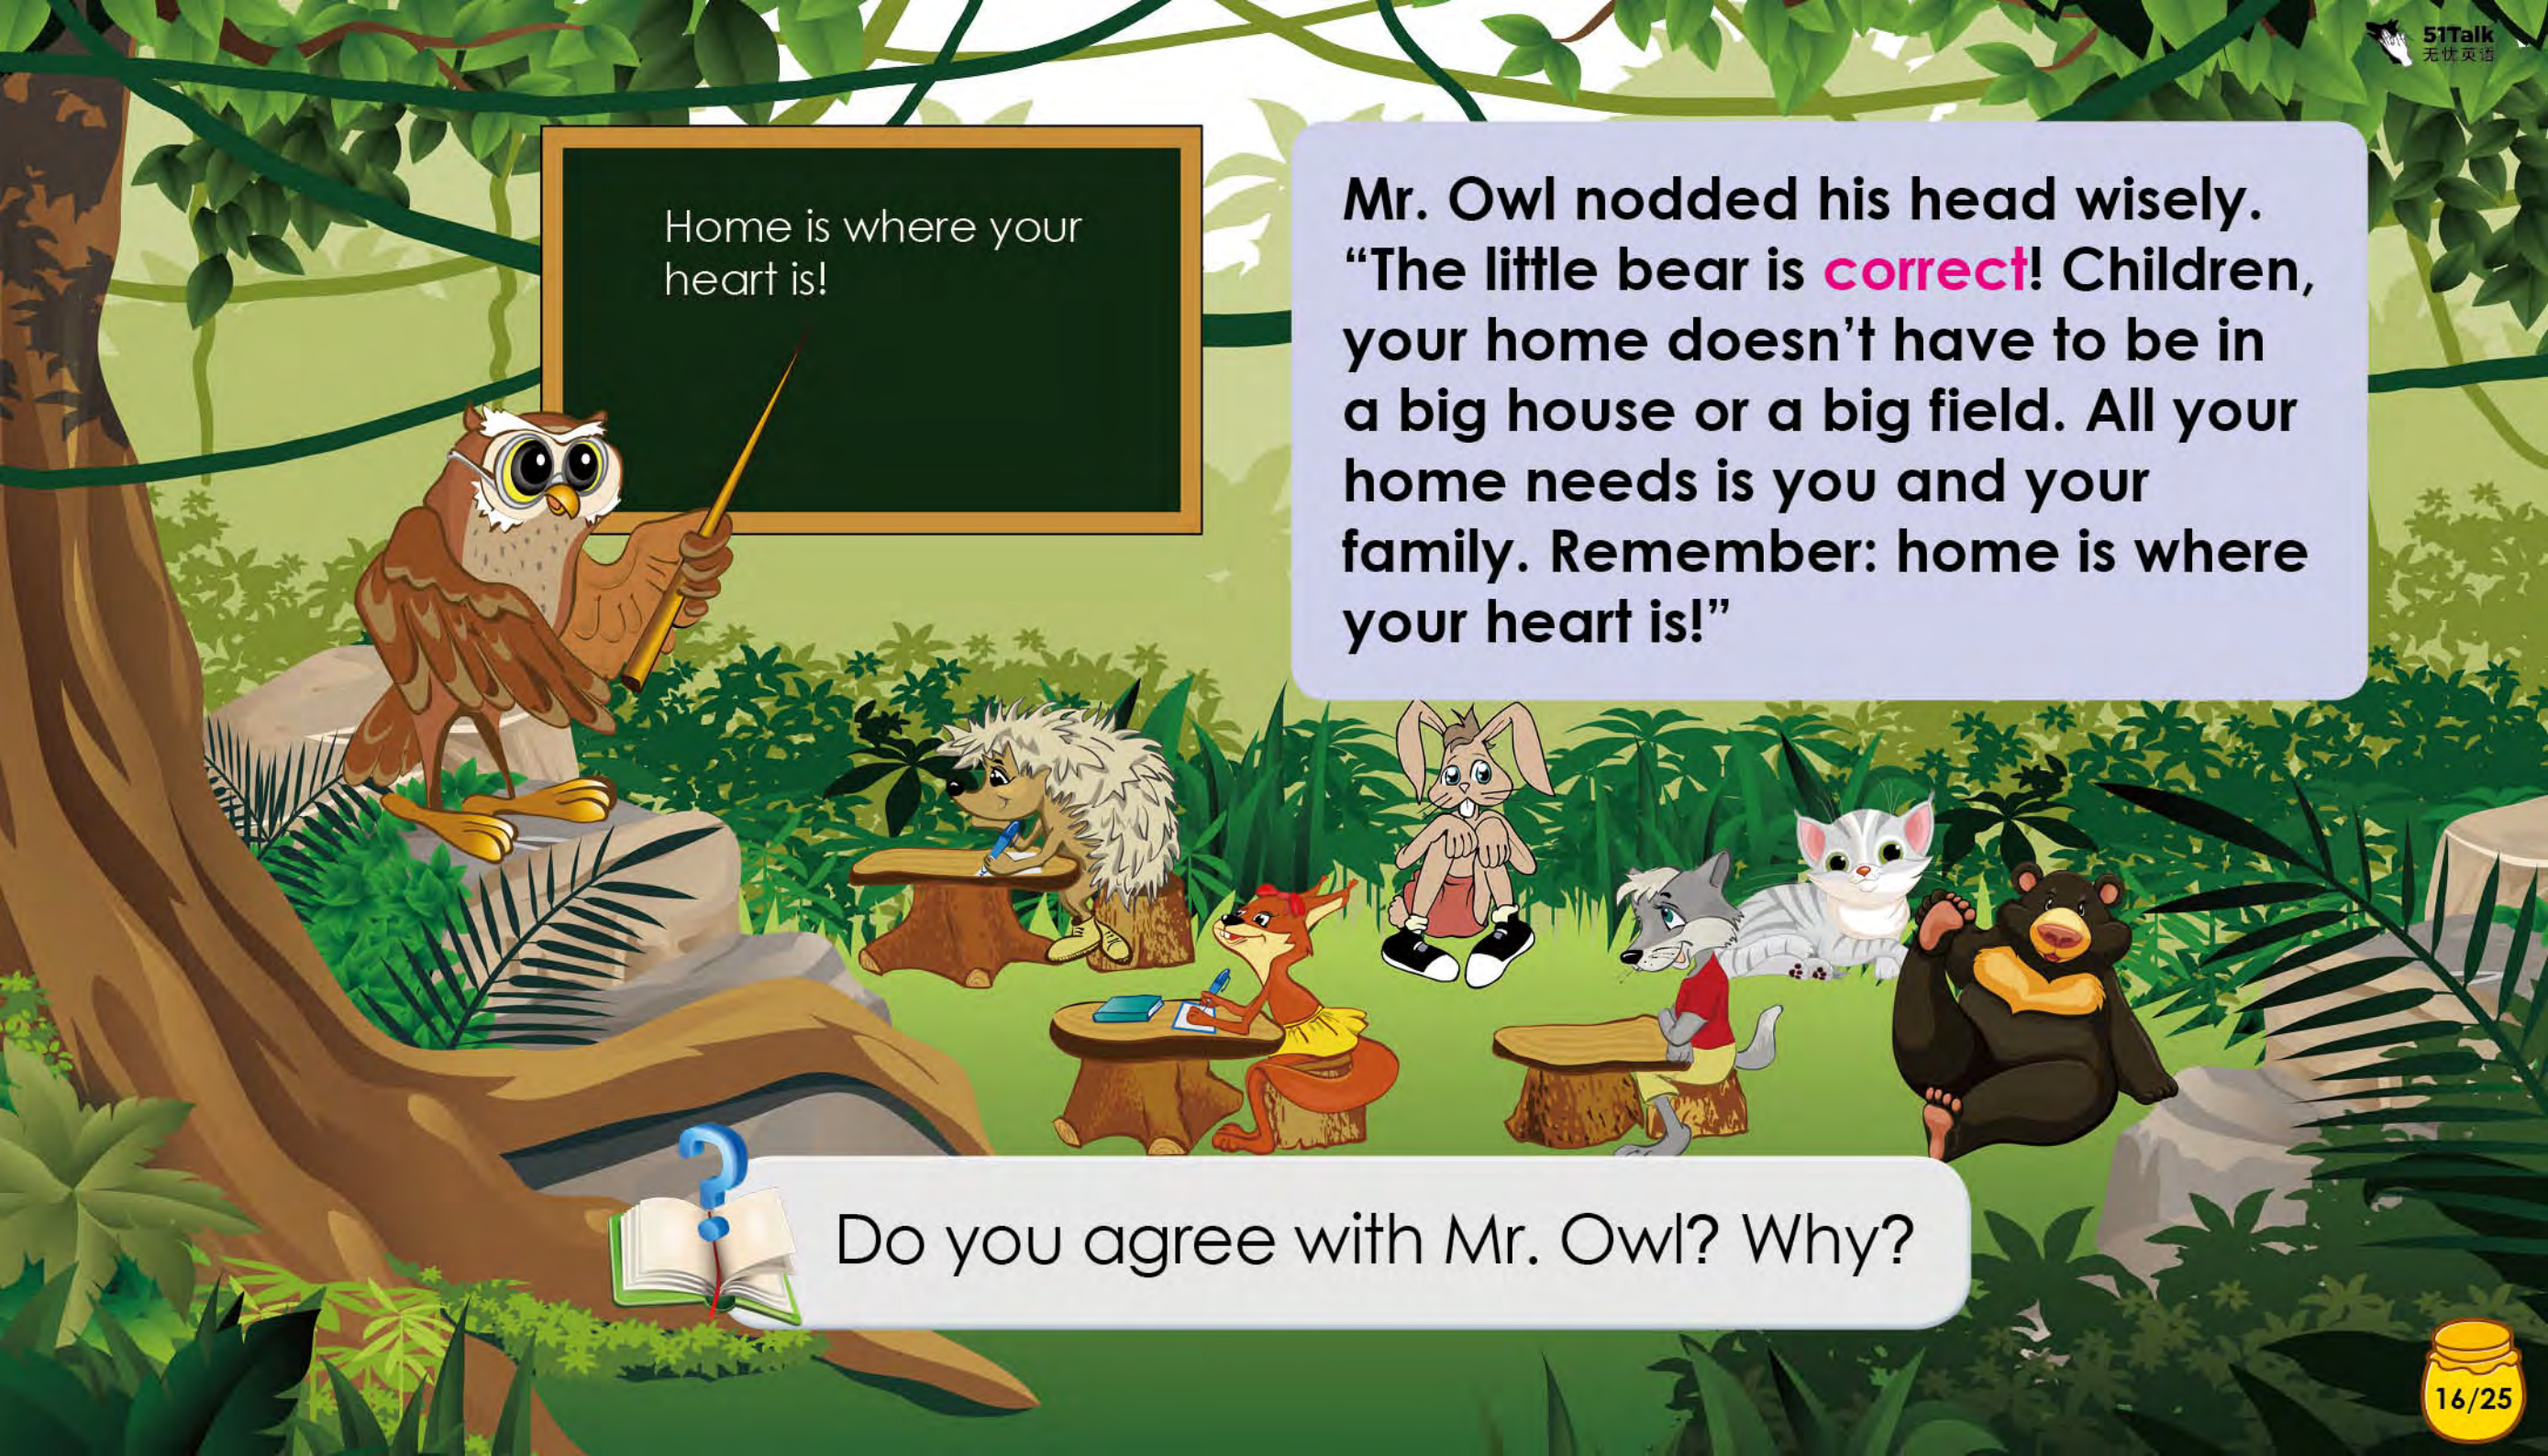
What is the rabbit’s home like?

today’s home

future home

Last, the little bear speaks. “My family lives in a forest. We often have to move home. Sometimes we live in small caves. Sometimes we live under big trees. But I know now that changing to a new home is not the most important thing. It is not important where my home is, or even how big my home is. It is only important that I will always be with my family.”

What does the bear think is the most important thing for a home?



Home is where your heart is!
Mr. Owl nodded his head wisely. "The little bear is correct! Children, your home doesn't have to be in a big house or a big field. All your home needs is you and your family. Remember: home is where your heart is!"
Do you agree with Mr. Owl? Why?
