com·mu·ni·cate

How do you communicate with your friends?

Mom bought Emma a new skirt, but she bought me nothing. It's not fair!

fair

You have four apples, and you want to give them to two friends. To be fair, how many should you give to each friend?

Let's read!

All of us have friends, but how many true friends do you have? How do you treat them, and how do they treat you?

How many true friends do you think you have?

A true friend will listen to you and support you. It is sometimes easier to talk about ourselves than to listen to others. A true friend is someone who is interested in listening to what you have to say. They will support and help you to do the things you want to do.

What will a true friend do?

You must be able to communicate well with your true friend. With a true friend, you will be able to talk freely and honestly about anything. This means that you must trust them deeply, and tell them your big problems and secrets.

With a true friend, what will you be able to do?

Real friends like you because you are you. They do not like you just because you are popular or you have lots of money or things. They like you as you are.

Will a true friend still like you when you are not liked by others?

Keeping a true friend can be difficult. You must be fair with your friend and always treat them the same way that you would like them to treat you. If you do something really bad, how would you like your friend to react? You should treat them in the same way.

How should you treat your friends?
Do you want your friends to lie to you? Should you lie to them?

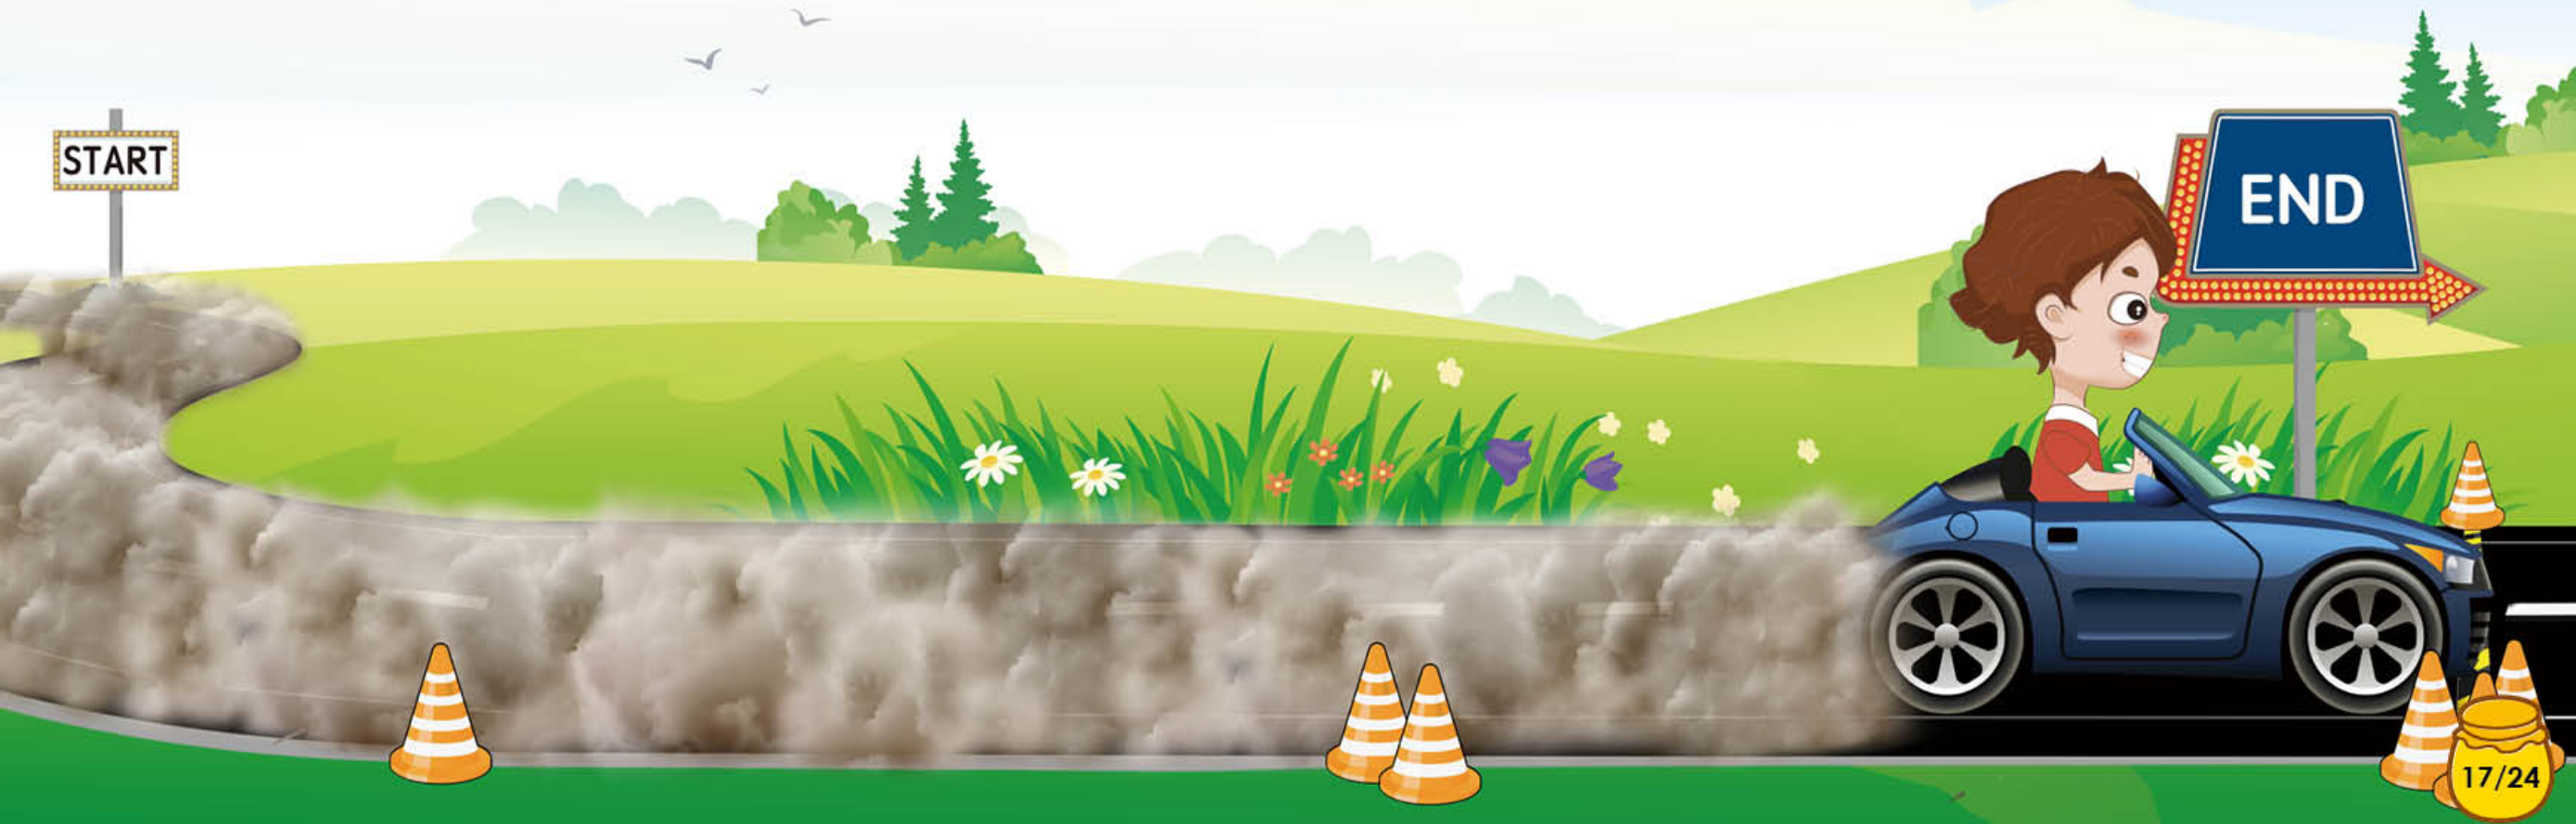

And, of course, a true friend makes you feel good. They make you happy and confident, like an important person.
