Let's read!

One day, a fox saw a crow standing on the branch of a tree. The crow was holding a piece of meat in her beak.

What was the crow holding in her beak?

The fox was very hungry. He said to himself, "I want the meat. I have to trick the crow into giving me the meat. But how can I trick her?"

How did the fox plan to get the meat?

The fox had an idea. He walked underneath the crow and said, "Oh, Mrs. Crow, you are so beautiful! I'm sure you have a beautiful voice too. Can you sing a song for me?"

What did the fox ask the crow to do?

The crow was very happy to hear this. She lifted up her head and began to sing. But when she opened her beak, the piece of meat fell down into the fox's open mouth.

What happened when the crow opened her beak?

“Thank you, Mrs. Crow!” said the fox.
“You sure have a beautiful voice,
but what I really wanted was the meat!” The fox quickly ate the meat, and the crow began to cry. The fox gave the crow some advice, “Next time, do not trust beautiful words!”

Do you agree with the fox's advice?
