Let's Talk!

Conversation

01:00

Conversation setting.

Cindy is talking with her mom about Alice in Wonderland.

Conversation

03:00

Role play the conversation.

Cindy, it's Saturday. Let's go to the park.

Sorry, Mom. I just want to stay at home and finish reading Alice in Wonderland.

That's OK. Well, when I was a child, I was just as much attracted to this book as you are.

Really? Mom, which character do you like best?

What does Cindy want to do?

Conversation

03:00

Role play the conversation.

Well, that is a good question. I think I like Alice the best. She is full of curiosity, kindness and courage, isn't she?

Yes, she is. She looks as if she dares to do everything.

Not everything, but the things she thinks are right. For example, in "Alice's Evidence" ...

Mom, stop please. I haven't read that part yet. Don't tell me too much about it.

Grammar

1. You can use like to say how somebody or something looks.

e.g. That house looks like it's going to fall down.

2. You can also use as if or as though instead of using like.

e.g. That house looks as if/though it's going to fall down.

Conversation

03:00

Role play the conversation.

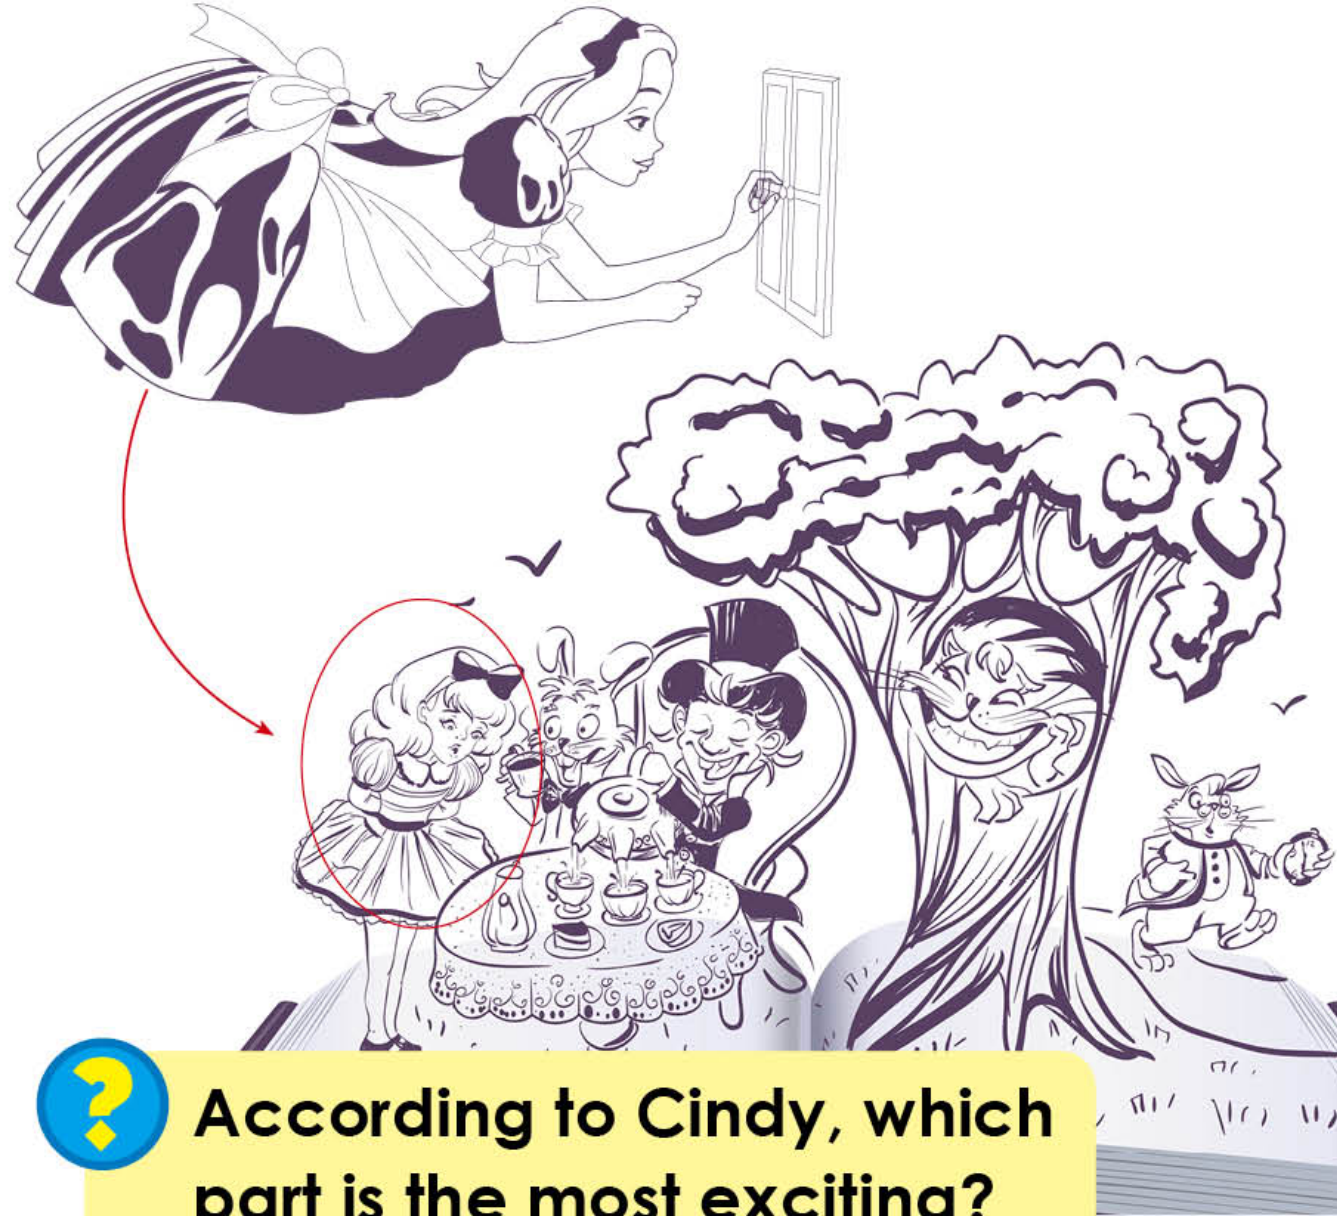

OK, my girl. Then as far as you've read, which part do you think is the most exciting?

It's "The Pool of Tears." In this part, Alice's height reduces from nine inches to two because of the magic gloves. You know that she can't get through the hole into wonderland if she is tall.

This part also made me excited. Let's talk more about it when I come back.

According to Cindy, which part is the most exciting?
