GRAMMARModal verbs (has/have to)

Has/Have to is a modal verb you put before another verb to talk about an action that needs to be done because of a rule or law.

Ex. Cindy has to help her mom clean the house every Sunday.

I have to wear my school uniform when I go to school.

Put has to or have to before the correct verb.

has to

1. Timmy [^]stay in bed because the doctor told him to rest.
 2. You return this book to the library in one week.
 3. We look both ways before crossing the street.

CONVERSATION

Timmy is in a recreational park. He sees his friend Sam.

Hi, Sam! What are you doing here?

I'm here to play paintball with my cousins. It's one of our favorite games. Would you like to join us?

What is Sam doing in the park?

I don't know. I've never tried paintball before. How do you play it?

Two teams compete in a battle. For my team to win, we have to get the flag of the other team and take it to our base.

What does Sam's team have to do to win a battle?

That sounds exciting.
What would I need to do during a battle?

With your paintball gun, you have to shoot the members of the other team to take them out of the game. Try not to get hit, so you can stay in the game and protect your team's flag.

What would Timmy need to do in a battle?

What do I have to do so I won't get hit?

You must hide yourself well. Players usually wear camouflage, so they're hard to see.

What is Sam wearing?

Players don't want to attract any attention from their opponents. They will get shot!

It seems like you understand paintball well now. Come on, let's play paintball, Timmy!

What happens when you wear camouflage in a paintball game?
