GRAMMAR

Past participles

A participle is a word formed from a verb that can be used as an adjective. One way to form a participle is to add -d or -ed at the end of a verb. These participles are called past participles and can be used to describe how a person feels.

The verb tire means to make someone lose energy or want to sleep or rest.
Too much homework tires Timmy.

When you add -d, the verb becomes an adjective.

When you are tired, you feel the need to sleep or rest.

Timmy is very tired because he did chores all afternoon.

1. Dinosaurs interest me. I am _____ in them.
2. Dark places scare me. I am _____ of them.

CONVERSATION

While waiting for their next class, Cindy invites Timmy to play in the park after school.

Timmy, are you busy after school? Do you want to go to the park and play hopscotch with me?

I really don't like hopscotch as an outdoor game. I prefer playing with marbles to hopscotch.

What game does Cindy want to play in the park?

Why? Do you think playing with marbles is better than hopscotch?

I like marbles a lot more because I always get excited before I flick a marble.

Why does Timmy like playing with marbles?

Really? How come?

It's because my friends and I always play for the chance to win each other's marbles. If I do well in a game, I get to take home new marbles.

What happens when Timmy does well in a game of marbles?

That does seem kind of fun. As for me, I get excited when I play hopscotch because I love to jump, count, and balance.

I'm sorry, but I don't really like doing any of those things, Cindy.

What does Cindy love to do?

Oh, let's not argue. Why don't we play hopscotch first and then marbles so we can both have fun?

That's a great idea! Let's also invite Sam, Peter, and our other friends.

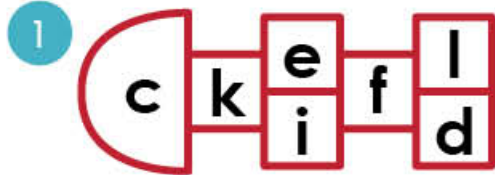

Who else does Timmy want to invite to play?

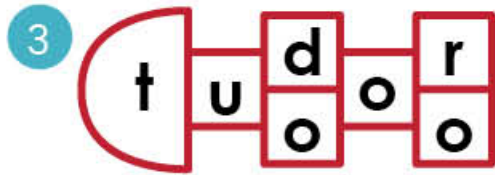

LET'S PRACTICE!

ACTIVITY

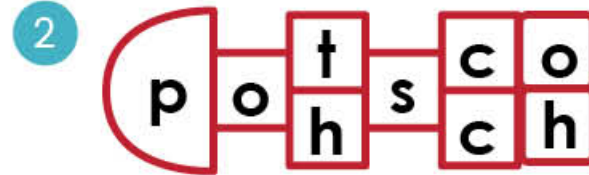

Arrange the letters in order to form the correct words.
Then, complete the sentences.
