

We are going to learn a moral story about the two sons who were stronger together.

Do you like to work with others or do things by yourself? Why?

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

There once was an old man who was really sick. He had two sons who never stopped fighting. One day he heard them fighting about who would inherit his house. The old man asked his servant to bring his sons to his bedside.

Why do you think the old man wanted to talk to his sons?

Read with the teacher and then move to the Word Focus.

The old man wanted to teach his sons a valuable lesson, so he summoned them to go outside and fetch a bundle of sticks.

- We learn valuable lessons from our parents.
- What valuable lesson have you learnt from your parents?

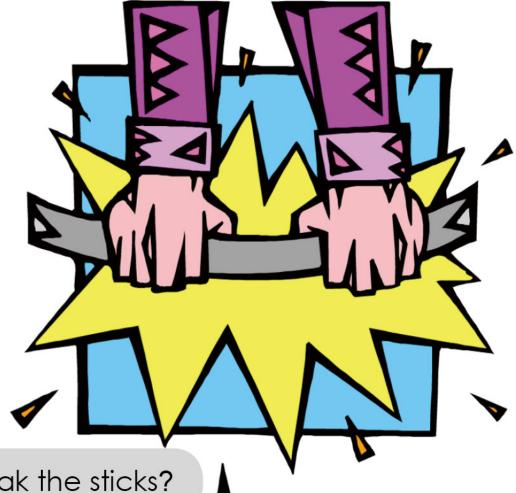

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

The old man asked the elder of his two sons to break the sticks. The son used all his strength, but was unable to do it. His other son also tried to break the sticks, but failed, too.

Why do you think the sons couldn't break the sticks?

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

The old man told his sons to until the sticks and each take half of them to break. The sons followed their father's instructions and found they could easily break the sticks now. The sons learned that they are stronger together when they are united.

Why do you think being united a good thing?

Fill in the blanks and retell the story.
