prospect

 Example: It's very hard to say what kind of objects are most collected by the Chinese. The collections vary according to several factors, such as gender, age and income, but one thing I'm pretty sure of is that most men, especially the middle-aged, like to collect things such as antiques or artwork that offer some prospect of financial gain.

 Example: I started collecting Star Wars souvenirs in primary school. This included all types of souvenirs, from toys, to books, to action figures, and video games. Like clockwork, I'd purchase a variety of different comics monthly, and once they arrived I would start looking through the coupons for any Star Wars toys I might have missed.

motivation

 Example: I suppose what people get from their collections depends on their motivations for collecting things. For people who like collecting things purely for personal reasons, they acquire a sense of satisfaction from seeking out and owning such things; for people who collect things mainly for financial gain, they can make money when their collection increases in value.

Extend your answer to 3-4 sentences. It's easier to get 6.5.

Model 1

What: Every year, there is a large variety of cultural events held in China. Among all these events, temple fairs are one of the most popular in many parts of China.

When: Temple fairs are held during Spring Festival, commonly referred to as Chinese New Year.

What: The fair always starts with a blessing ceremony, since the fair's primary purpose is to seek blessings for the coming year. Traditional Chinese performances, such as dragon, lion and waist drumming dances are given to show respect to the gods, while praying for good luck in the coming year. At a typical temple fair, people can enjoy authentic local snacks while appreciating the beautiful handcrafts and antiques.

How: Personally speaking, I like this cultural event not only for its entertainment value and the opportunity to purchase hard-to-find handmade items, but also because it is a special event where people can embrace their culture and history. A lot of the snacks, plays, as well as the arts and crafts at the fairs are made by ethnic minorities. Therefore we are supporting the preservation of the lifestyles and cultures of ethnic minorities.
