He was known to us all as Dickie and his eccentricity had become legendary long before he died. Dickie disliked snobs intensely. Though he owned a large car, he hardly ever used it, preferring always to go on foot. Even when it was raining heavily, he refused to carry an umbrella. One day, he walked into an expensive shop after having been caught in a particularly heavy shower. He wanted to buy a 300-pound watch for his wife, but he was in such a ^{全身泥污的} bedraggled condition that an assistant refused to serve him.

First ...

Dickie was an eccentric.

- True eccentrics never deliberately draw attention to themselves. They disregard social conventions. Their behavior usually wins them the love and respect of others.
- Dickie was one of the most notable figures in our town. His eccentricity had become legendary long before he died.

Then ...

One example of Dickie's eccentricities.

- One day, after having been caught in a very heavy shower, Dickie went to an expensive shop to buy a 300-pound watch for his wife.
- The assistant in the shop refused to serve Dickie because he was in such a bedraggled condition. Saying nothing, Dickie left the shop.
- When he returned, he carried a cloth bag containing 300 pounds in pennies, and asked to see the manager. Recognizing who he was, the manager reprimanded the assistant severely.
- After Dickie got the watch, he insisted that the assistant count the money in the bag, which was his way of getting back to the snobbish assistant.
