

JOURNEY to the WEST 94
The Elephant Demon

The lion demon rubbed his aching mouth.

“Let’ s leave the Tang Monk alone.

Wukong returned to his companions.

He heard Bajie and Wujing arguing.

“Here I am!” said the monkey.

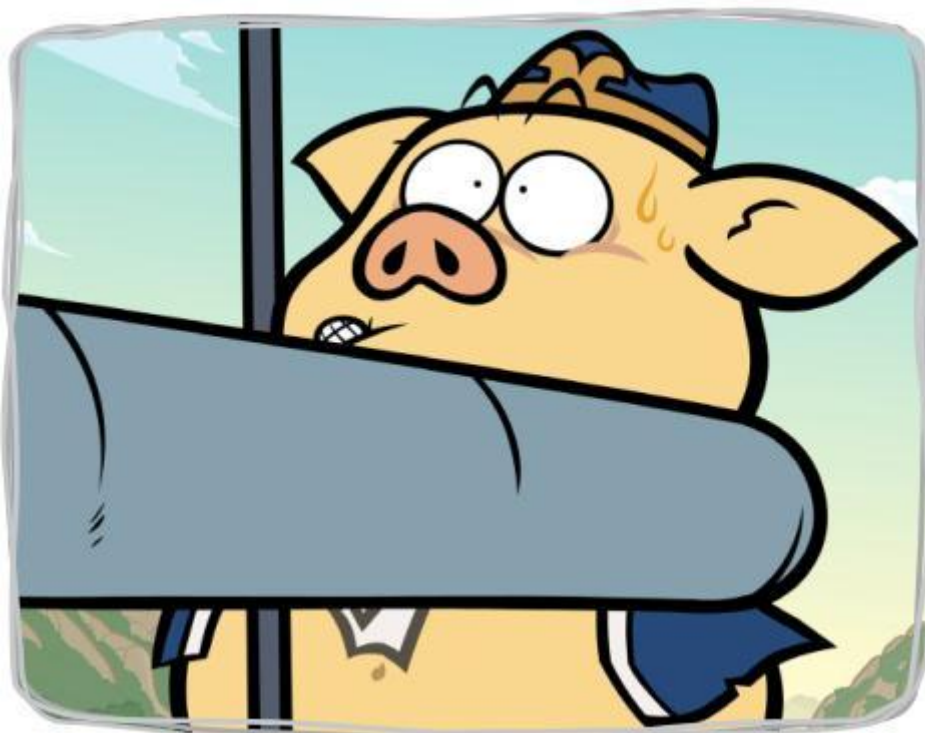

They hadn’ t gone far when they saw a large figure ahead,
blocking the road.

Wukong turned to Bajie.

It' s your turn to fight them.

Before Bajie could duck,
the trunk wrapped tightly around his body.

The pig was tied up, floating in a tub of salt water.

The elephant' s trunk wrapped tightly around Wukong' s chest.

“Ow! Ow! Ow! ” the elephant cried.
He released Wukong and fell backward.

As the travelers came around a bend,
they saw the lion and the elephant.

The raptor had grabbed the monkey' s companions with its talons.
