

JOURNEY to the WEST 96

Wind and Fog

I hope we reach the Western Paradise soon,”
said the Tang Monk.

The group felt a strong wind blow down
from the mountains up ahead.

High above the road,
a fat monster was sitting on the edge of a cliff.

The monster patted his belly.
“Yes, I’ m proud of that one.”

The monster covered one nostril with a finger, closed his eyes, and blew hard.

Wukong shook his head.
“I’ m not worried about these demons

“Bajie,” he whispered.

“There’ s a village up ahead.

The pig turned to the Tang Monk.

“Master, I think I should go ahead and “Braap!” The monster burped again,

and another wind blew.

The demons cheered and followed the monster down the mountain.

“Hello!” said Bajie, smiling.

“I’ m here for the feast!”