

JOURNEY to the WEST 102

The Prisoners Are Released

Lady Kou ran into the courthouse early the next morning.

They hurried to the Tang Monk's cell.

A guard swung open the cell door.

Lady Kou bowed to the Tang Monk.

“I framed you for killing my husband,” she said.

Wukong rubbed his chin.

“I can probably bring him back to life.”

“I’ ll go to the Land of Darkness and talk to the Judge of the Dead instead.” said Wukong.

When Wukong entered the Palace of Darkness,
the Judge of the Dead frowned.

Wukong went to the Jade Palace.

“Greetings, Sun Wukong,” said the bodhisattva.

The bodhisattva smiled. “Very well.

The squire may return to Earth

The bodhisattva brought Wukong to an office.

Squire Kou was sitting behind a large desk

The squire came out from behind his desk and bowed.

“Thank you, Bodhisattva.

The monkey recited a spell, and the squire vanished.