what the subject is

who taught that subject

and explain why you liked/disliked that subject.

Model 2

What: My favourite subject in high school was history.

Who: My history teacher was a young lady who had a master's degree in the subject. She had taught history for three years before we enrolled into her class. As far as I can remember, she was a very good-looking lady with long straight black hair.

Why: History was the class I enjoyed most for two reasons. The primary reason was that I took a personal liking to my history teacher. My history teacher had a humorous personality and an encyclopedic knowledge of history, which kept her class lively yet still intellectually stimulating. In short, she made learning history a pleasure, which made studying painless. The second reason was that , as life itself has to move forward and develop despite so many hardships around us, history gives me an opportunity to study how the people before me made decisions and endured them. This enables me to make judgments on how to proceed in solving the current issues of the day.

You are required to talk for the full 2 minutes.

They have a great influence on their students, and can help set a young mind on a course of lifelong learning.

 Example: Research studies suggest capturing students' interest is the key to improving academic results. If students are interested in a certain subject, their desire for studying it will be stimulated, and they will start to explore the subject of their own initiative. Thus, their knowledge on the subject will naturally be expanded.
