Model 1

What: My favourite TV programme is called Jamie at Home, which is a cooking show in the UK.

What content: This programme is hosted by a very handsome guy called Jamie Oliver, who is also the cook in this programme. In the programme, Jamie shows the audience how to cook with simple ingredients at home. Almost all the ingredients he uses are fresh from his backyard garden. In each episode, Jamie focuses on a specific ingredient and show viewers totally different recipes, for example, different recipes for making carrot cake and different recipes for making vegetable soup.

How often: I watch this programme every Friday. Watching it has been a part of my daily life.

Why: I enjoy watching it very much. Unlike the recipes in other cooking shows, the recipes in Jamie at Home are simple enough to learn. Well, I also cannot deny that Jamie's good looks are another reason why I enjoy watching it.

Model 2

What: My favourite TV programme is called The Artist. It is a very famous talk show in my country.

What content: Every week, this programme invites one or several celebrities such as famous writers and musical performers as guests. During the programme, the host interviews the guests. The guests share their touching stories, and talk about life and the world with the host. At the same time, the audience in the studio can ask freely the guests questions such as “What problems did you meet on your way to success and how did you overcome them”.

How often: I watch this programme on TV every Sunday night.

Why: I love this programme. It focuses on showing the guests' real personality through sincere communication, which is rare in other talk shows. What's more, the stories shared by the guests are very inspirational. These stories make me understand that there is no shortcut to success except working hard.

You are required to talk for the full 2 minutes.
