Model 1

What: The website I'd like to tell is Ted.com, which you might have heard of before, and possibly even been on.

How you found the address for this website: This website is strongly recommended by my teacher, Phoebe.

What it contains: As for what's on the website, put it simply, it's basically a huge collection of video speeches by various people from all kinds of fields, so it's really a great resource for learning stuff. It doesn't cost anything to listen to the talks. What's great about it is that you can choose Chinese or English subtitles for most of the talks, and also download them onto your computer. I also like to read the comments written by other people who have watched the talk.

Why it was useful to you: It's a good website—well first and foremost, it's because the majority of talks are incredibly interesting, at least in my opinion, so there's a tremendous amount you can learn from them.

Another good thing about it is that the talks on the website don't go on for too long. We've all listened to speeches which drag on and on, but these ones are generally quite short and to the point.
