Model 1

What: Only a few days ago, I was asked to give my opinion in a survey. This survey was about what the public should do to protect our environment. This survey was carried out by my friends who were quite interested in environmental protection.

Why: As my major had something to do with the environment, they asked me to give my opinions. And I am also willing to help them.

What opinions you gave: I told them that we can do many things to protect our environment, for example, recycling rubbish, planting more trees and controlling the use of plastic bags. Besides, making people realize the importance of protecting environment is also significant.

How you felt: I was quite willing to give my opinions in this survey because I was very happy that my knowledge could offer some help.

Model 2

What: Last month, I came across a student in the street. He asked me to give my opinions in the questionnaire designed by his classmates and him. This questionnaire was about what affected consumers' choice of healthy food.

Why: As the student wanted to collect ideas from different people, he asked everyone he came across for help. I encountered him at Oxford street and he asked me if I could do him a favor. I said yes.

What opinions you gave: To be honest, I was not very familiar with that field, but I tried my best to help him. I told the student that people's income would affect their choice. Besides, people's knowledge about healthy food would also affect what they choose to eat.

How you felt: I was very glad to give my opinions because I was willing to help others.

You are required to talk for the full 2 minutes.
