Model 1

Who: My friend, Candice, has been an important part of my life since junior high school.

When and where: The two of us clicked as soon as we met. Both of us were members of the dancing club at our school. We practiced dancing together, pushing each other to our limits, and in the meantime, deepened our friendship.

What: We share the same interests, especially in literature, and we like to read together in our spare time. Candice prefers science fiction while I have a preference for romantic novels. Despite these slight differences in taste, our passion for reading has brought us much closer together.

Why: Candice is an attentive listener. Every time I encounter an obstacle in life, she is always available to listen to me. Although she may not always have a solution to every situation, she still gives me a sense that I am not alone in this world. For me, she is considered family, not by blood relation, but by the strength of our emotional connection.
