Key words and key sentences

coincidence

 Example: I'm convinced six is my lucky number. According to the traditional Chinese lunar calendar, my birthday is on the 6th of June. Also, my college dorm room number was 606, which I don't believe is a coincidence. If I need to pick a number for a raffle, or some other gambling opportunity, I always pick six.

indicate

 Example: Eight and nine are considered the most popular in China. Both numbers have positive symbolic meanings. Eight indicates success and wealth, and nine symbolises longevity. Phone numbers and room numbers that contain the digits eight and nine generally go for a higher price on the Chinese market due to these superstitious beliefs.

 Example: There are various types of numbers I need to memorise. For example, I commit emergency phone numbers, passwords, and the deadlines for important assignments to memory. With the introduction of online banking and social media, the number and complexity of passwords that I need to memorise has increased sharply.

注: superstitious 基于迷信的; 相信迷信的

3.1 Here is a model for the IELTS Speaking Part 2. We will focus on the sentences highlighted below. (4 mins)

Model 1

What: In high school, I disliked maths the most. During my whole three years in high school, I struggled with this subject nonstop.

Who: My maths teacher was a middle-aged man of medium height. I recall he was a very serious person who never smiled or encouraged his students.

Why: His teaching method was quite boring, which was the primary reason for my dislike of maths. Typically, he taught in a rigid manner — he introduced a theorem by writing its definition on the blackboard. Then, he asked us to do exercises using the newly taught theorem again and again. I know that maths is a very useful subject which can be applied in many fields, like budgeting, basic accounting, and doing taxes. However, I learned nothing from my classes but the boring definitions and tedious exercises. Finally, I was bored and got trapped in a vicious circle of hating and failing. I often got confused about the different theorems and the assigned course work. I usually failed the maths exams, which nearly drove me to despair. I have to say, the entire experience of learning maths was terrible.
