Model 2

What and which day: Whenever there is a big family reunion, there is one dish that my grandmother absolutely loves cooking: pig's feet.

How to cook it: It takes a long time to prepare pig's feet, but the ingredients are simple. We only need ten pig's feet and a few common spices. By the way, my grandmother cooks the best pig's feet in the neighbourhood. Firstly, my grandmother seasons the feet for two hours with a special sauce that is her secret recipe. Secondly, she fries the seasoned feet till they turn golden. Finally, she steams the feet in a pressure cooker for twenty-five minutes and then the pig's feet are ready to be consumed.

Why: Everyone in my family loves the dish pig's feet immensely because of two reasons. One reason is that it's a known fact that pig's feet are nutritious. They contain a lot of protein which is good for your muscles and brain. The other reason is due to the special meaning. My grandmother always tells us that those who eat pig's feet will become extremely lucky and wealthy.

You are required to talk for the full 2 minutes.

Although each region varies in their personal choice of food, it is a fact that rice is regarded as a main component all over China.

implement

 Example: As far as I know, most people from older generations learned how to cook from their parents; however, people in this day and age, not only learn to cook by watching their favourite cooking programs on television, but also they implement knowledge gained from cookery books to develop their own cooking style.

aside from

 Example: The differences between food prepared at home and in a restaurant are plentiful. Aside from the obvious contrast in atmosphere and service, the ingredients are also different. A restaurant will have more means to cook a wider variety of food; however, unlike homemade food, the consumer is usually unaware of the freshness of the ingredients or if it was prepared properly.

2. Imagine you are a candidate in the IELTS test. The teacher is an examiner. Please answer the questions below with what you have learned to develop your IELTS answers. (5 mins)

Key sentences

I like going on adventures and I never get bored of exploring the mountains and their surrounding landscapes. Every spot ahead of me is unknown, which pushes me to explore further and stimulates my adventurous spirit.

When traveling in a group I have a set of rules to follow, but I can tour the city freely when I am not with a group of people, and I am totally capable of being my own tour guide.

If I am stuck in a tour group, I will be forced to mostly interact with the members in the group, which may cut my chances of meeting new and interesting people.
