Name and where: I would love to visit Washington D.C. , the capital of the United States of America.

How you know of it: My first encounter with the major capital cities of the world was from a textbook in grade school, and from then on I have always wanted to visit the capital of the U.S.

What you would do: Like most capital cities around the world, Washington D.C. has many monuments and museums. I would really like to visit the Smithsonian so I could see ancient artifacts from the past, especially artifacts that showcase American history. Also, I think watching an American baseball game while in D.C. would be an authentic American experience.

Why: There are a few reasons why I want to travel to Washington D.C. First, I want to travel to Washington D.C. so that I can observe the center of political life in the United States. Another reason I want to travel there is that I think traveling to another country's capital city is the best way to learn about its culture. For me, being at the center of American culture , and especially politics, during this unique time in history would be an amazing experience.
