The former holiday has Zongzi which is a sticky rice treat, while during the latter holiday you can enjoy delicious moon cakes.

Example: Depending on the length of the public holiday I will either do things indoors or outdoors. If it is a rather short holiday, I will spend the bulk of my time indoors, for example, relaxing at home by catching up on reading popular novels, or visiting a museum. Model 1

What: I'm a huge fan of challenging indoor activities, mainly, rock climbing. Since my first rock climbing experience in Taiwan two years ago, I've started to make room in my schedule for rock climbing every Saturday. It's basically a routine for me now.

Where and Who: Mostly I choose to go rock climbing at the local gym near my campus. Occasionally, I invite a friend or two to climb with me, and we will usually hold a small rock climbing competition simply for fun.

Why: Rock climbing plays an important role in boosting my physical health in that it helps build my muscles. Every time I get back from the gym, I can feel a massive growth in strength, because I keep practicing holding onto the rocks while lifting and lowering my body weight. In addition, rock climbing also improves my mental health. I have learned the spirit of never giving up, which is of the essence throughout the rock climbing process. So I think I really have benefited a lot from it, both physically and mentally.
