What the trip was for: Ever since I entered high school, my school has sponsored various fieldtrips throughout the school years. These trips were mostly educational and took place near the end of each term.

Where you went: I remember once visiting a place that impressed me the most. It was a science museum called the Omniplex.

What you did there: The reason I loved this place was that it had a myriad of scientific activities to take part in. Particularly, I enjoyed visiting the section of the museum related to the human body, because there was an obstacle course made with giant fake body parts! Another awesome thing about this museum was the various simulators that made virtual reality seem real.

Who you went there with: Since it was a fieldtrip organised by the school, I had to go with my classmates.

Why you thought this trip was educational: This trip was wholly educational. The central point of this science museum was to introduce children to the world of science by making it fun and interactive. Over the course of the unforgettable tour to Omniplex, I have certainly learned much interesting knowledge about the world of science!

What are the benefits of travelling?

I: Actually, there are numerous merits that can be found in each travelling experience.

P1: First and foremost, travelling can teach you about this colourful world in a hands-on way. Whenever going on a trip, particularly a global tour, you gain immediate access to abundant knowledge about foreign cultures and customs. How beneficial it is to explore the unknown!

P2: Besides, travelling can usually revitalise yourself and provide for you the much needed R&R (Rest and Recuperation).

P3: One of the last great benefits of travelling lies in the fact that getting out of your comfort zone can oftentimes lead to fresh and interesting experiences.

2. You will learn some key words and expressions from these questions. Pay attention to the structure of the underlined sentences, and the words in red. (5 minutes)

Where did you spend your last holiday?

 As far as I can recollect, my last holiday was spent joyously and unforgettably in the woodlands. To be more specific, I went to the United States during my last summer vocation with my parents and it was quite an educational experience. Frankly speaking, I have always dreamt about visiting the country full of mysteries and attractions. Once there I travelled to their most famous wildlife reserve known as the Yellowstone National Park. How amazing it was to see animals in their natural habitat! I even managed to snap a few photos of a pack of wolves!

Do you think it is good to take children travelling?

 It depends on how old the children in question are. When it comes to babies aged below three, they should absolutely be dissuaded from going on tedious journeys, especially on airplanes, even if accompanied by their legal guardians. Anyhow, no one, be it passengers or crew members, would be willing to sit and listen to loud crying for the entirety of a flight. However, children who are at least above the age of five should have enough discipline to travel with their parents and behave in a manner that is civilised. Meanwhile, the more places young children are capable of visiting, the more knowledgeable and open-minded they may become in the future.
