You should say:

what it is

where you usually eat it

what the meal is made of

and explain why you like it.

Tips: During the first stage of Part 2, you don't need to talk. Keep the questions in mind and think them over.

2.3 Here is another model for the IELTS Speaking Part 2. We will focus on the words and expressions highlighted and in red below. (5 minutes)

Model 2

What: Jiaozi is a traditional Chinese dish that is of the utmost importance to many Chinese families.

Why: Actually, jiaozi exists throughout the eastern society and owing to its easily recognisable crescent or half-moon shape, it's made its way to all corners of the globe. In the West, this dish is known as dumplings. Since this particular food originated in China, it makes jiaozi extremely special!

What it is made of: This dish can be steamed, boiled, or fried. Similar to the ways in which it can be prepared, there are also tons of ingredients that can be adopted. To illustrate, dumplings are oftentimes stuffed with pork, beef, shrimps, chicken, vegetables of all sorts, and even eggs. In China this dish is also served with soy sauce or vinegar for dipping your jiaozi into.

Where: If the opportunity presents itself, I would love to get the chance to cook this myself, but usually this is something my mother and my grandmother are skillful at, as it takes a veteran to make this dish perfectly. Therefore, in the meantime I'm constricted to eating this at restaurants.

IV. IELTS Speaking Part 3 (10 mins)

1. Please answer the following question from Part 3. According to your answer, the teacher will give you feedback on how to improve your organisational skills. (5 minutes)

How to organise your answer in Part 3:

T: Topic Sentence + S: Supporting Details (Explanation/Examples)

Are there many vegetarians in China?

T: I think it would be a fair assessment to say there are some vegetarians in China.

S1: Nowadays, Chinese people, especially those dwelling in urban areas, are attaching greater importance to health. Consuming too much meat will possibly lead to a series of diseases. Thus, some Chinese, hoping to adopt a healthy lifestyle, choose to become vegetarians. The existence of special vegan restaurants also seems to indicate that there are some vegetarians in China.

S2: Besides, since Buddhism is practised by some Chinese and this philosophy advocates not eating meat, it would seem logical that many Chinese people abstain from animal flesh.

2. You will learn some key words and expressions from these questions. Pay attention to the structure of the underlined sentences, and the words in red. (5 minutes)

Key Words and Models

Is the food that people eat today in China different from the food people used to eat in the past?
(If yes, in what ways has it changed?)

 Although some aspects of the food culture have changed in China, there are still traditional types of food prepared. Currently, you can eat many dishes with rice as the main component and rice has managed to be a mainstay in the typical Chinese people's diet for centuries. When compared to the past, food in China is different with regard to availability. Now you can eat all manner of Western foods such as hamburgers, hotdogs, and French fries; however, in the past these foods were not available to consume.

How do you think the way we eat will change in the future?

 If the current trend of fast food persists, I believe that edibles will become even more condensed so that they are even quicker to ingest. This type of food would have the best of both worlds; it would be compact yet full of flavours and would provide the added utility of being easy to transport. Alternatively, every home in the distant future could have a "food 3D printer" which could make cooking obsolete.
