Read with the teacher and then move to the Grammar Focus.

There are two main kinds of wine, red wine and white wine. You can make them both in the same way. The only difference is the kinds of grapes that you use to make the wine. Now we are going to learn what ingredients are in wine.

Grammar Focus

- If you want to emphasize a particular topic in your sentence, you may write it as a what clause.
- Example: What I wanted was a new experience.

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

After picking the grapes from the vineyard, washing them, and checking if they are all fresh, it's time to press them to make the juice come out. Big companies use machines to do this, but smaller companies press the grapes by stepping on them.

Why do we have to press the grapes to make wine?

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

The juice from the grapes is then checked for its sweetness, flavor, and quality to see if it is good enough to be used for wine. When the checking is done, the juice is kept in barrels for a long time to help improve the taste because the older the wine is, the better it tastes.

How long has the bottle of wine in the picture been stored for?

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

Usually, people choose to match white wine with seafood and chicken. When they drink red wine, they like to match it with red meat like beefsteaks. In France, people drink wine with almost anything, so the average person in France drinks over forty-five bottles of wine per year.

What drinks do you like to match with your food?
