

Feeling the Vibration

We are going to learn about some animals' strong sense of touch.

Warm-up

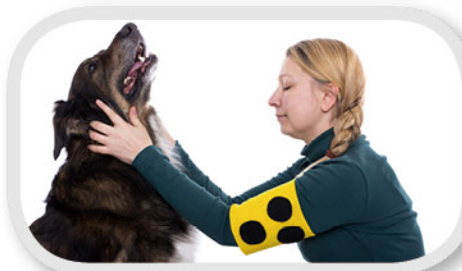

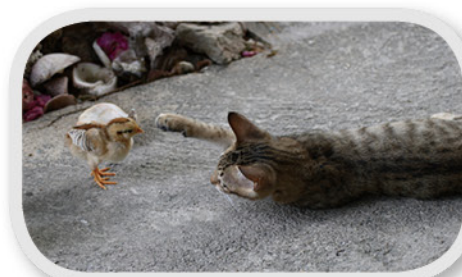

2 min

What would it feel like to touch these things?

Reading*3 min

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

Speak while you touch your throat. Do you feel the vibration? This is the sense of touch. Animals have this sense as well and some can even sense far beyond what is obvious.

Do you know any animals that have a very sensitive sense of touch?

Reading 4 min

Read with the teacher and then move to the Word Focus.

Rats and birds can perceive the tiniest vibrations, so they are able to predict earthquakes better than humans.

Word Focus

- Rats perceive sound better than humans.
- What can birds perceive better than humans?

Reading*4 min

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

Spiders make webs to catch their prey, but a spider doesn't eat everything that it catches. A spider uses vibrations to determine whether the insect is prey or a partner.

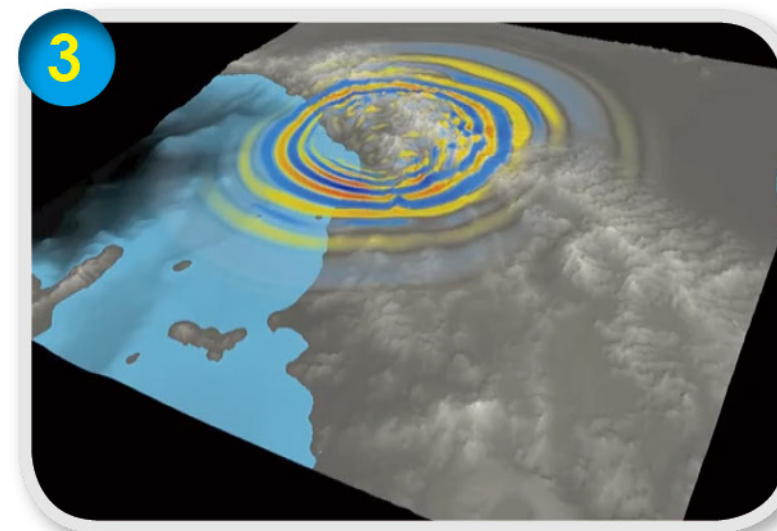

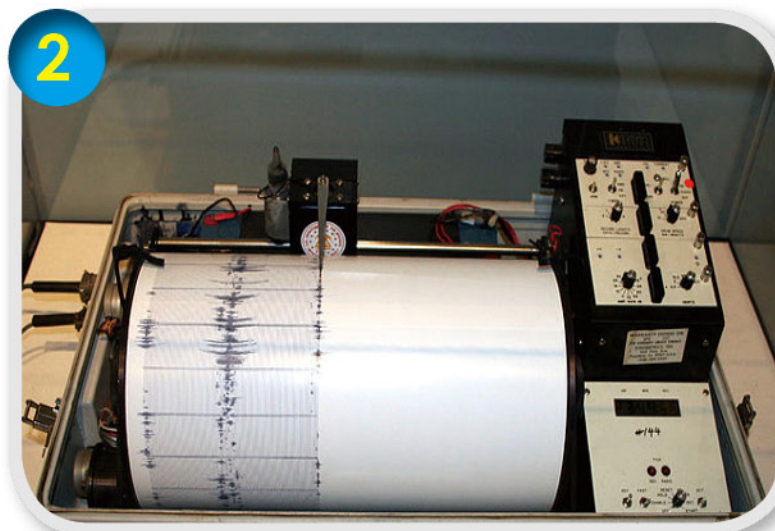

What does a spider do with the insects it catches?

Reading*3 min

Read with the teacher and then answer the question below.

Humans use the method of feeling vibrations to determine things too, such as trying to study and predict earthquakes. These people use a seismograph to measure how powerful an earthquake is.

What do people use to study earthquakes?

Let's practice. >>
