Model 1

Who and how old: Professor Yang, a professor of linguistics at my father's university, is the oldest man I know. He is already 104 years old.

What kind of person: Professor Yang devoted his entire life to his career in linguistics. His firm work ethic has made him an authority figure on various aspects of language. In his mind, he firmly believes that a language can signify the ideas and beliefs of a particular culture.

What's interesting: Even though Professor Yang has been retired for nearly forty years, he still stays involved in the most cutting-edge research on languages.

What life he/she has now: Not only has the Professor continued writing essays throughout his golden years, but he has even dabbled in other fields of study, such as International Relations and Politics. To this day, he still writes pieces for important academic journals and other popular magazines.
