Experiments have proved that children can be instructed in swimming at a very early age. At a special swimming pool in Los Angeles, children become expert at holding their breath under water even before they can walk. Babies of two months old do not appear to be reluctant to enter the water. ^①It is not long before they are so accustomed to swimming that they can pick up weights from the floor of the pool. A game that is very popular with these young swimmers is the underwater tricycle race.

1. It is not long before they are so accustomed to ...

➤ It's not long before sth. = sth. happens in a short time

E.g. (1) It's not long before we can have a car.

(2) It's not long before he changed his mind.

(3) It's not long before someone discovered the problem.

Tricycles are lined up on the floor of the pool two meters under water. The children compete against each other to reach the other end of the pool. Many pedal their tricycles, but most of them prefer to push or drag them. ^[2] Some children can cover the whole length of the pool without coming up for breath even once.

^[3] Whether they will ever become future Olympic champions, only time will tell. Meanwhile, they should encourage those among us who cannot swim five meters before they are gasping for air.

2. Some children can cover the whole length of the pool ...

➤ “Cover” here means to travel a particular distance: cover the whole length of the pool = go from one side of the pool to the other side

3. Whether they will ... , only time will tell.

= Only time will tell whether they will ...

➤ The [object clause] ^{宾语从句} introduced by “whether” is put at the beginning of the sentence to express emphasis.

E.g. Whether he will keep his promise, I will never know.

= I will never know whether he will ...
