Model 2

What it is & when you read it: One particular book that I have always wanted to read and just recently found the time to is the book titled the Idiot, which was written by the 19th century Russian author Fyodor Dostyevsky. The title is an ironic twist on the protagonist's imposition, as his simplicity and open-heartedness are seen as stupid and mistaken in a worldly and aristocratic society.

Why you read it: The reason why I wanted to read this novel is that it is a famous piece of fiction written by one of the greatest Russian authors and is considered a literary masterpiece. Since I have always been interested in Russian literature, reading this philosophical novel was inevitable.

What you liked (disliked) about the book: There is much to like about this book in the way of plot and character development. The story manages to capture the readers' attention from the very beginning and allows them to sympathise with the characters in a way that can only be achieved by Russian authors at this specific period. Reading this novel gave me a window with which to look through and spy the life in Russia at that time. Besides, I value this book for the insight it gives on these matters through the author's skillful use of poignant words.

How to organise your answer in Part 3:

T: Topic Sentence + S: Supporting Details (Explanation/Examples)

Do you think reading is important?

T: Reading is a fundamental part of what it takes to be a well-rounded, fully actualised human beings.

S: Reading reinforces what makes us intellectual and spiritual beings, and is an indispensable part of anyone seeking to embark on a course of self-development. Whenever I hear that someone “doesn’t like to read,” I cringe a bit inside. It is absolutely necessary for people to continue to embrace reading if humanity ever hopes to survive another 5,000 years on Earth.

2. You will learn some key words and expressions from these questions. Pay attention to the structure of the underlined sentences, and the words in red. (5 minutes)

Key Words and Models

Do people in your country like to read books?

I think many people in China enjoy reading books; however, they also enjoy other forms of entertainment. There is a growing tendency of Chinese people consuming media other than books in the modern period, and those who do read tend to use non-conventional means of reading, such as Kindles, Ipads, or cell phones. However, this has not affected the important status of literature in the Chinese culture, and novelists like Nobel Prize winner Mo Yan are still revered.

Do you think paper books will eventually be replaced by electronic books?

It is difficult to say. I've heard arguments that electronic books are theoretically more environmentally friendly than cutting down a forest for reams of paper to print books that will tear, rip, and age into dust. As a purely emotional matter, however, there is something irreplaceable about the sheer physicality of holding an actual book in one's hands.
